LEVL Extends Wi-Fi access for 100K South African Township Residents

LEVL partners with Ikeja to deliver secure, private browsing

On June 20th each year, WBA celebrates World Wi-Fi Day™ - a global initiative to help bridge the digital divide and connect the unconnected around the world. Wi-Fi allows all citizens around the world - in both developed and developing countries - to stay connected, even during this challenging time.

This event is especially important to LEVL as our mission is to ensure network users can enjoy privacy and personalization while connected. All too frequently, lower income people are forced to choose connectivity that showers them with advertisements and collects their personal information. By partnering with Ikeja, a local Wi-Fi provider to South Africa, we are proud to make a donation to extend secure and private Wi-Fi access to over 100K low-income township residents in South Africa. Of course, this is a one-day event but our commitment is real. Our LEVL-IQ Device Intelligence Platform will help deliver low cost, private access to digital citizens.

Whether through relationships or access to knowledge, connectivity empowers people and improves lives. Through seamless connectivity, business happens, children learn, and communities thrive. We don't believe anyone should have to trade their personal details, and private information for this basic right to access information. AND we have proven that personalization and network services can coexist with the highest levels of personal privacy, with the LEVL-IQ platform.

We support Wi-Fi day because we need a more connected world, where online privacy is a right and not a privilege.

LEVL would not have the opportunities it has today, without Wi-Fi. If Wi-Fi can do this for one startup, imagine what it can do for the unconnected college student or rural family? LEVL support's the Wireless Business Alliance's efforts in World Wi-Fi Day

My child has been blessed to continue their education online - throughout the pandemic. We support every child and every family's need for Wi-Fi access; the education it enables, the confidence it provides and the opportunities it creates.
